

sinclair uses the public airwaves free of charge, and is obligated by law to serve the public interest. Since when does public interest mean subverting news into a political message?

We are now getting more of what's good for the companies' profit margins and less of what a citizenry needs for informed participation in a democracy. We are provided less information and education and served more sound bites and profit-serving factoids.

sinclair's actions show why the license renewal process needs to involve more than a returned postcard. Thank you.
